- Political Scenario

Nigeria's government is composed of legislative, executive and judicial system. The power of their government is bestowed upon them by four pillars – (i) the Constitution of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, (ii) the National Assembly, (iii) the President and (iv) the federal courts, including the Supreme Court, the highest court in Nigeria.

The President is the head of - the state, government and a multi-party system. Nigerian law is based on three things – the rule of law, the independence of the judiciary, and British common law. Because of the prolonged colonial influence by the British, Nigeria's common law shares many similarities with the common law system of the British.

The Constitution of Nigeria is its supreme law. The four distinct legal systems of Nigeria include English law, customary law, common law and Sharia law.

- The collection of British laws from colonial times is included in the English law.
- The indigenous traditional norms and practices are the source of customary law.
- Common law consists of the collection of authoritative judicial decisions from the field of civil law.
- Sharia law is applicable only in the muslim-dominated region such as Northern Nigeria, Lagos state, Osun state, Ogun state, Kwara state. Muslim penal codes, punishments, offences vary in every state according to the religious affiliation.

The Supreme Court of Nigeria is the highest court of the judicial branch.

- Economy

Nigeria is categorised as a mixed economy, middle-income and emerging market. In terms of nominal GDP, it is the 31st largest economy in the world. At present, this economy is suffering from an ongoing crisis in the power sector.
